

Class rules and visions

During the Introduction Meeting on 29th August we as a class came up with some suggestions for rules and visions that we would like to see fulfilled during the course. Rules are more binding, visions are ambitions that we try to fulfill through commitment.

Rules:

- Listen and respect each other's opinions
- Keep commitments in group workshop
- Sit next to people sitting alone instead of at the other end of the room
- Pay attention to people, when you're in the phone. Don't use your phone too much
- Remember one new person's name each week
- Read course material before the sessions
- Be on time

Visions:

- Say anything you want. Be inclusive with what other people want to say
- Encourage participation
- Go to the pub after class with your classmates
- Widen perspectives
- Bring food to share
- Leave class with optimism and hope
- Plant ideas that continue (like the way that CEMUS was founded in the 1990s)
- Be engaged in conversations
- Share aspects from our different cultures (e.g. recipes)
- Do something social together every two weeks
- Do something that involves the community
